What is Open Education?

- A way of carrying out education, often using digital technologies. Its aim is to widen access and participation to everyone by removing barriers and making learning accessible, abundant, and customisable for all. It offers multiple ways of teaching and learning, building and sharing knowledge. It also provides a variety of access routes to formal and non-formal education, and connects the two.

Opening up Education: A Support Framework for Higher Education Institutions, 2016, EC JRC

Open Education Practices

- Collaborative practices which include the creation, use and reuse of OER and pedagogical practices employing participatory technologies, peer learning, knowledge creation and sharing, and empowerment of learners.

(Cronin, 2016)

Have you used or prepared open education resources (OER) for teaching so far?

 Start presenting to display the poll results on this slide.

The Power of Open Educational Resources

- Improved access to textbooks
- Improved quality of student learning and learning materials
- Improved teacher professional practice
- Improved access to resources in local languages but also world wide
- Cost savings for learning
- Support for lifelong learning
- Cultural diversity

- The use of open licences ensures that teaching and learning materials are rich not only in terms of quality of the content but also in terms of the possibility for the materials to be retained, reused, remixed and redistributed

The potential of open education

Increase the quality and the relevance of the educational offer by:

- Using open approaches to teaching and learning via digital technologies (free and open courses, MOOC, OER, flipped classroom...)
- Creating and using open source software and encouraging open standards
- Making research available as open access publications
- Facilitating digital credentials and encouraging personalized learning portfolios
- Recognizing open learning and new ways of issuing and registering verifiable credentials
- Promoting new funding opportunities for universities and diverse carrier paths for lecturers and researchers who are committed to open education
- Including multiple stakeholders in the making of a relevant and transparent higher education sector (ministries, regional authorities, decision makers, headmasters, educators, parents...)

If we take the position that education is common good and should be reachable and available to all, it is our obligation to join efforts and work in this direction.

Open Educational Resources (OER) can help in achieving inclusive education aiming to ensure that learners with diverse needs and preferences (such as those with disabilities) have equal opportunities in accessing learning resources, services, and learning experience in general.

International Associations support openness in education, research and in life as it is a culture that will enable us all to equally participate in life we were given.
